

Climate change: the case for businesses to take action hots up

24 April 2020

In a world increasingly focused on the effects of climate change and its contributory factors it is likely that corporations will be closely scrutinised in relation to their climate-related policies and statements. Failure to substantiate claims or claims about actions with little practical effect are likely to be noticed and publicised leading to reputational loss.

Read more: Climate change: the case for businesses to take action hots up.

Contacts

Dr. Marion
Palmer

Senior Scientist

> Read the full article online