Biography

Francesca Angeloni is an environmental law and regulatory lawyer and heads the Italian public law practice.

With over 20 years' experience and a consolidated track record in regulated and strategic market sectors such as energy, infrastructure and industrial projects, Francesca provides support in pure regulatory matters (permitting, compliance, contracts with public authorities), M&A deals and litigation, enjoying rights of audience before the higher courts. She has developed an Italian practice capable of offering clear, pragmatic and multi-faceted advice on these areas of the law.

She is a seasoned lawyer in her field, and clients really value her contribution, at a technical, business and practical level, thanks to a huge reservoir of experience and practical know how in her areas. Her capability of working in an international and a multicultural environment, alongside the client, with cross-border or multidisciplinary teams, and her excellent language skills are her assets, a rarity among public law lawyers in Italy.

Francesca is ranked as a Leading Individual in Administrative and Public law, and in Environmental Law by Who's Who 100 Top Lawyer, Legal 500 and Chambers Europe.
