

Electronics and Consumer Appliances

Do you have questions about long-term compliance with consumer or product safety regulations or consumer liability risks? Questions about the privacy and cybersecurity issues raised by connected devices or questions relating to the collection, purchase, or use of personal data? Concerns about sourcing, supply chain, or distribution arrangements? Has your company been named in a putative class action lawsuit? Our cross-practice, global team is uniquely placed to help you address the shifting challenges of this evolving sector.

Electronics and consumer appliances play an ever increasing role in our daily lives. Technological change is happening faster than ever. As technology develops and distribution channels evolve to meet changing technology and consumer demands, the legal issues confronting the sector are growing. We address your most crucial concerns by truly understanding how you operate, what you need, and how best we can offer our support.

In such a fast-changing industry, experience is often the key to success. Through our cross-practice approach, experience is exactly what we provide. Our extensive understanding of regulatory matters, intellectual property, consumer product litigation, data privacy and cybersecurity, connectivity, M&A, FCC licensing, supply arrangement, and equipment authorization, enables us to advise you in a wide variety of areas, tackling your specific needs wherever and whenever
