

Data Protection

Pension scheme trustees and employers need to manage information about their members in compliance with various laws. You maintain records of names and addresses. And you maintain details about salaries and the state of your members' health. Is your data managed properly? Is it secure?

The lawyers at Hogan Lovells help make sure that this data is processed appropriately and lawfully. We advise pension trustees and employers in the EU on transferring data to providers across borders. We help trustees ensure they are compliant, and review your agreements with the administrators. We guide trustees on how to process member information without breaching data protection requirements.

Latest thinking and events

Insights

Cryptocurrency disputes: five things every litigant should know

Press Releases

Hogan Lovells advises Howden Group on the acquisition of Grupo Artai

Hogan Lovells Publications

The Future of ACES is Living Mobility

Press Releases

Hogan Lovells advises Allianz in its bancassurance alliance with BBVA

Press Releases

Hogan Lovells welcomes Irish Government's commitment to the publication of the Commission of Investigation Report into Mother and Baby Homes and to implementing the right of

Contacts

Katie Banks,
London

Practices

Pensions

Crisis Leadership Team

access to personal records under the GDPR

Hogan Lovells Publications

Hong Kong Corporate Insights | August 2020